

Turn compliance into evidence.

If your business holds ISO certifications, or needs them to win work, you will know the pattern. The management system lives in spreadsheets, shared drives and email threads. When the audit date lands, evidence is reconstructed under pressure, and between audits the system quietly decays: supplier records go stale, the risk register becomes a once-a-year exercise, and the same problem gets investigated three different ways by three different people.

Certiqa is a governance platform for small and medium businesses that turns compliance into evidence. Information is captured once, while the work is being done, and linked everywhere it is needed. Every register is live, with a named owner and a review date. Every approval is recorded. When the auditor arrives, the audit pack takes minutes to produce, not weeks.

— The Audit & Evidence Workspace, live: everything current, owned and linked.

Why it is different

Certiqa is built by people who run ISO management systems, not by a software company guessing at them. Behind it is a Chartered Engineer and IRCA-qualified auditor with a Lean Six Sigma Black Belt and fifteen years in regulated industry. It is audit-ready by design, modular so you can start small and add standards as you grow, and practical about change: it fits how your team already works rather than demanding a new way of working on day one.

Where Ai helps, it drafts and proposes; a person reviews and approves, and every action lands in an audit trail. Your governance stays yours.
